Dear Congressman Rohrabacher,

Certainly extraordinary conditions call for extraordinary actions! As our elected representative, I have always come to look upon you as one of those outstanding individuals in which to believe. This is the main reason I voted for you.

Considering the serious financial conditions we now face in the US economy, I am also confident we can count on you once more, to demonstrate by deed, not just by word, to set an example for others to follow.

Knowing our faith and trust in you is not misplaced, let me call upon you to introduce the following simple notion.

1. One that will only be be viewed as an act of true heroic proportions
2. a patriotic gesture of the highest order
3. A positive demonstration of responsible and responsive government in its highest form
4. A gesture that I can safely predict would absolutely earn the immediate respect of the entire American taxpayer, especially at an all time when taxpayer confidence is at its lowest level in many years

As one of our few standup legislators, upon whom I have always looked with great confidence to act as a leader and not a follower, I would like to propose the following thought as a simple gesture. A gesture so simple, that if adopted, I predict would be received with such a resounding, overwhelming vote of confidence by the American citizens, that in itself, the adoption of this very basic idea may begin to restore the lagging confidence and reestablish faith in our American legislative process. Yes, Congressmen Rohrabacher, not only stop the current financial problems in its tracks but even reverse the direction of the current negative financial trend.

Just what is this simple notion you ask? The simple act of voluntarily enacting a 20% reduction in pay across the board for all legislators, effective immediately! What better way to for our elected government officials to positively demonstrate the seriousness commitment to lighten the collective burden of the American taxpayer.

At this very strategic point in our current endeavor to restore the global economy it seems very fitting to draw on the words of the immortal JFK when he stated, “Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what can you do for our country?”

What do you say Congressman...can we count on you?

Thank you,

Arnie Rosner
