Obama administration defies congressional subpoena on Fort Hood documents

The Obama administration said Tuesday it would provide more information to Congress about the Fort Hood shootings but continued to defy a subpoena request for witness statements and other documents. After days of negotiations, the Pentagon and Justice Department informed a Senate committee that they would not comply with congressional subpoenas to share investigative records from the Nov. 5 shootings at Fort Hood, Tex., which killed 13 people. The agencies said that divulging the material could jeopardize their prosecution of Army Maj. Nidal M. Hasan, the accused gunman. The Pentagon did budge in other areas, however, saying it had agreed to give the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs access to Hasan's personnel file, as well as part of an Army report that scrutinized why superiors failed to intervene in Hasan's career as an Army psychiatrist, despite signs of his religious radicalization and shortcomings as a soldier. Leslie Phillips, a spokeswoman for the Senate committee, called the refusal by the Pentagon and the Justice Department to hand over all the requested material "an affront to Congress's constitutional obligation to conduct independent oversight of the executive branch." She said the committee, chaired by Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman (I-Conn.), was still deciding whether to pursue the subpoenas in court. The committee has complained that the Obama administration has been stonewalling it for months over its Hasan probe, prompting it to issue the subpoenas April 19.
Pentagon press secretary Geoff Morrell said the Defense Department has tried to cooperate as much as possible with the Senate investigation.

"We feel as though we have leaned very far forward," Morrell said. "This is as far as we are prepared to go." He said that Deputy Defense Secretary William J. Lynn III spoke Friday with Lieberman and Sen. Susan Collins (Maine), the committee's ranking Republican, in an attempt to resolve the dispute but added that he didn't know whether the Obama administration's offer would be enough to satisfy the panel.

As you requested...
I am providing you with documents that lead me to suspect Mr. Obama is indeed a fraud.

You see dear members of Congress we now know...and we know, you know...and we know, you know, we know!

By the way...might just seem like a good time to revisit the eligibility issue...don't you think? So maybe now that OB has you and the rest in a box he no longer needs to honor the dignity of the People's house?

So maybe the CRS reports were not so reliable? Maybe the information on which the entire Congress was led to believe that the illegal alien usurper was eligible was deliberately fraudulent? Maybe the entire 111th Congress and the Supreme Court got scammed? Could that be?

Can you believe that...? The smartest group of legislators in the world, scammed by what may turn out to be a snake oil salesman.

Don't you think you should stop appearing so stupid and investigate for yourselves? Don't you think something as important as our national security is more important than the word of someone who could probably not even get a driver's license in Washington DC?

Well now...maybe everyone should re-examine the information for themselves?
